Sugar Plum Tree provides holiday smiles

By Suzanne Sprout

Their wishes are carefully handwritten on poinsettia cards near a decorated Christmas tree at the Montclair Plaza.

Theirs aren't grand wishes. The children don't ask for the world. They've grown used to settling for little things.

"All these requests are from children in need — they've either been abused, neglected or abandoned. They've learned from experience not to trust people. I think that's the nicest thing about this project.

"I've been there delivering gifts to the children when they ask me why someone they don't know has bought them a Christmas present. I tell them it's because they care enough to want them to have a happy Christmas," said Kathy Espinoza, San Bernardino County Child Protective Services supervisor.

The project is the Sugar Plum Tree. It provides a way for those who want to help to share some of the holiday spirit with the less fortunate. Sponsored by volunteers and the county agency, the project is designed to bring Christmas morning smiles to more than 2,500 needy children.

The Sugar Plum Tree project has helped children for the past seven years. The need is still there.

"Last year the trees at the Montclair Plaza and in Redlands and Victorville helped provide toys for 1,700 children. This year the need has increased as we try and help those throughout the entire county," Espinoza said.

The tree is located in center court next to JC Penney on the lower level of the mall. Shoppers can stop by and sift through baskets of wishes.

One four-year-old boy asked simply for a battery operated car, while a three-year-old boy wanted a stuffed animal. In the basket of wishes from girls, a seven-year-old said she'd love to receive a Cabbage Patch doll. A six-year-old girl asked for a doll.

Shoppers then leave their name, address and phone number with volunteers manning tables near the tree. Shoppers are given the card to go gift-hunting. They are then asked to bring the gift to the tree by Sunday.

Montclair Plaza officials have donated wrapping paper for the gifts. Volunteers have made ornaments to decorate the tree and as small thank-yous to shoppers who have decided to help.

The project is coordinated by Betty McNay of Rancho Cucamonga with the help of members of the National Charity League, Ticktockers,

"The National Charity League and Ticktockers helped last year, too. I think that's a nice way to join mothers and daughters to help children with special needs," Espinoza said.

Eliane Townsend and her daughter, Nathalie, helped again this year.

"Working with the Sugar Plum Tree is one of our philanthropies. We all volunteer for a two-hour shift," the Upland mother said. "Instead of exchanging gifts among themselves, Ticktockers members donated their time here."

Museum supporters start restoration work

By Candysse Miller

With the help of volunteer art experts from the J. Paul Getty and Los Angeles County museums, supporters of the Chaffey Communities Cultural Center in Upland began to sift through the ashes of a recent night fire to salvage remaining artifacts of early West Valley life.

Teams of experts scoured the blackened cases of the center a week ago, searching for fragments with which to rebuild the burned-out museum.

"We just wanted to help," said Getty Museum objects conservator Linda Strauss, who helped organize the effort. Strauss brought together a group of art experts who specialize in antiquities, furniture and ethnic arts to help assess the damage and organize a salvage effort.

Though their work collecting items inside the museum concluded that day, it was only the beginning of months of restoring, planning, fund-raising and rebuilding facing the museum.

Several items will require special treatments and preservation efforts in order return to their original quality, she said.

Sifting through the smashed glass and ash-covered floors of the church-turned-museum, the art conservators said they discovered some pleasant surprises, however.

Museum/

Four oriental rugs apparently charred by the fire began to resemble their former selves after volunteers hosed them down and brushed them off. Until the rugs can be cleaned, they will have to remain wet to prevent further damage, said Los Angeles County Museum objects conservator David Rasch.

Such items as glass lamps, beads and pottery jugs appeared unscathed by the fire, protected by objects that had fallen on top of them, Strauss said.

"Generally, the smaller things did better," she said.

A collection of woven Indian baskets almost were completely destroyed, however. Museum board member Lynn Merrill called the baskets one of the museum's greatest losses.

The 76-year-old building fell victim to a suspected arsonist late Tuesday night, but museum board members have vowed to rebuild both the former church and its valuable contents to their original state.

"We feel we can rebuild. We feel that we can bring back to the community a first-class museum," said Merrill, who oversaw the salvage process that day.

City building inspectors confirmed that the building should be able to be restored to its original state.

"We must emphasize that this is only our first look," said Upland building engineer Sam Makar. "It may need reinforcement. But it seems that the structural frame is still good."

Makar called the inspection results "good news" for the museum, but added that a bell tower gutted by flames must be rebuilt from the ground up.

Despite the charred walls and water-logged hardwood floors of the museum, Merrill said that the damages were less than he originally expected.

"Initially, I thought, 'Oh my God. It's all lost,'" he said. "But it's in better shape than we first thought."

Merrill credited firefighters for combating the blaze without causing severe water damage to the interior of the wood-framed building.

Nonetheless, damage estimates for the contents alone are ranging between $250,000 and $500,000, he said.

Visions/

Plum Tree are as touching as the wishes, according to Espinoza.

One Upland woman chooses 60 wishes to grant each year, Espinoza said. The gifts are always chosen with great care and many times are expensive.

"She leaves little messages with the gifts she leaves her family, explaining that she spent some of her money on children who needed her help," the social worker said.

One family this year purchased three new bicycles to grant three wishes from the tree.

And last year a 19-year-old man stopped by the tree, asking what he could do with $9.49 he had to spend, she said. He bought a toy truck for a child.

"He said he was a foster child himself and hoped that the truck would make Christmas easier for someone," Espinoza explained.

What volunteers and groups can provide, many local department stores try and help make up the difference. The tree is supported by K mart, The Broadway, Mervyns and Target.

"Many office people come here to spend their money instead of having office Christmas parties. The plaza people have been wonderful. Valley View Mesa Christmas Farm in Alta Loma donated the tree. The Montclair Fire Department helped us decorate the tree with lights. People from the Association of Retarded Citizens, Ontario-Pomona contribute many hours.

"It's a whole spirit of cooperation each year that we need and these people provide. We're trying to reach more children," she said.

Recent rains wash away water worries

By Kimberly Heinrichs

Recent rains have washed away worries that Southern California's water supply would be cut this year by a statewide drought.

The State Water Resources Department had proposed a small 1.5 percent drop in water from Northern California, but rains during the first 10 days of December have convinced it otherwise, Metropolitan Water District spokesman Jay Malinowski said.

MWD, which supplies the local Chino Basin Municipal Water District with 10 to 20 percent of its water, received a letter last week assuring its request of 1.03 million acre feet.

"The DWP indicates a 99 percent probability it will be able to give us the water," Malinowski said. "I think that's as high as they get unless there's a hurricane."

Chino Basin's general manager Theo Nowak never was worried for the West Valley because of its reserves, he said.

If the proposed cut had been spread evenly, Chino Basin would have lost 450 acre feet of water from the State Water Project, he said. An acre foot is 326,000 gallons, enough to meet the needs of a family of five for one year.

But MWD has 68,000 acre feet already stored in the basin for the local district's use, Nowak said.

In addition, recent rains here will add significantly to the local supply.

"This is a good saturation rainfall," he said. "I think most of it is going to soak into the ground and not run off to the (Santa Ana) river."

The state had feared a drought similar to the one in 1977 — the worst in California history — before this month. Last winter was dry and a second one in a row could have made a dent in the state's water supply.

Although the Chino Basin gets much of its water from local mountain streams and stores it in unusually large underground caverns, much of Southern California is more dependent on water from the soggy northern half of the state.

State water officials had been talking about cutting agricultural water supply by 50 percent and urban use by 10 percent, Malinowski said. Now, the urban requests will be supplied in full and agricultural use cut only by 30 percent, he said.

Donations needed to buy rose float flowers

By Marianne Aiken

The current cold spell could take the snap out of a Rose parade dragon if Cal Poly students don't get donations to help buy flowers for their float.

It's not the local crop that's in trouble, said Cal Poly Pomona float publicity chairman Matt Sellers, but the crop in San Luis Obispo.

"Our flowers as far as I know are doing OK so far," Sellers said Wednesday. "San Luis Obispo's having some problems. They're trying to raise money for buying flowers."

Buying flowers is going to be expensive because other professional flower growers in Central California have had their crops freeze too, Sellers said.

"There's going to be a shortage of flowers in January," he said.

The Cal Poly float, shared by both campuses, is going to be of a little boy reading a book about a dragon who comes to life and is reading over his shoulder.

The title of the float is "Imagine That," said Ann Steele.

Victoria residents bid farewell to rustic concept along parkway

By Lee Peterson

This is one patch of grass on the other side that is guaranteed greener.

It took $700,000, but the residents of one Rancho Cucamonga neighborhood have bid farewell to the "rustic concept" — the city's mile-long attempt to make the suburbs look rural.

The suburbanites said rural is nice for the country, but not for the parkway entrance to their planned community.

The shaggy turf that turned brown in winter and the rough edges of the winding Victoria Park Lane didn't appeal to the families in the Victoria development.

No sooner had the rural grass taken root than the homeowners let the city know that they wanted the manicured turf they had known before moving to Rancho Cucamonga.

So city workers ripped it out and started over.

"Most people here are from the suburbs of Los Angeles and Orange counties and are used to the manicured lawns," said Councilwoman Deborah Brown, a resident of Victoria.

Brown said the developer's preliminary abortive attempt to rectify the situation by cutting back the grass and spray-painting it green did not help.

The well-chronicled zeal of suburbanites for the tid, appearance of their own lawns carried over to the parkway and created a groundswell of support for a total makeover.

While residents waited, motorists along the road have been treated to a sort of citified "landscape" — orange-vested workers adorning the median island.

Although the turf started the ball rolling, a list of safety improvements soon comprised the lion's share of the project.

The city's Engineering Department took the opportunity to install new curbs, lower a few vision-blocking hills, and build a fence at one point to discourage school children from crossing the street at unsafe points.

The people who are paying for it are the homeowners within the particular landscape maintenance district. They pay an annual assessment of nearly $200.

Brown said it was one of her top priorities when she won her council seat last November to get the project moving.

The long grass also posed problems for the maintenance crews, Brown said. "One company bid $30,000 or $40,000 just to mow it," Brown said.

The past look was backed by Etiwanda residents, wary of the impact of a massive housing development just east of their rural neighborhoods.

Merchants Christmas may be merrier with road open

By Candysse Miller

Merchants in Benson Avenue's Upland Commerce Center may have a merry Christmas, despite forecasts of a gloomy holiday season.

Shop owners at the business park watched holiday profits plummet and held off paying their rent after a nearby water main project closed the street.

When project managers learned of the merchants' plight, however, they opted to move elsewhere until after the profitable season is over.

"It only seems sensible to be as reasonable with the community as possible," said Emmett Lowry, general manager of the Joint Powers Authority.

The authority is building the multi-million dollar water-main project for the cities of Upland, Ontario and Chino as well as two water districts, Lowry said.

Although the project must be on line by July and is only about 60 percent complete, Lowry said he instructed construction crews to move elsewhere until after the first of the year. The crews then will return to complete their work.

"That's great. That's exactly what I requested in a letter to him," said Tim Genske, property manager and leasing representative for Trojan Enterprises, a Glendora company which owns the business park. "For some of them, that will make a real great Christmas present."

John Gulizia, owner of Piano World, 555 N. Benson, also saw the change of heart as a boon to business.

"That sounds great. That's really good news," he said. "I really do think (it will help businesses at the plaza) because it was getting so close to Christmas and we weren't getting any of that traffic ... I think it will make a difference, a real difference."

Earlier, Gulizia was reducing the prices on the pianos that normally would earn him two-thirds of his annual profits.

The store owner said that he had to make the cuts in order to lure customers into his shop.

"We were getting the weekend mall bypass traffic, but we haven't had a customer walk in here in two days," Gulizia said that day, referring to the traffic the small center relies on: commuters and shoppers trying to avoid the traffic on Central and Mountain avenues.

When the water project closed Benson Avenue only two blocks away, Gulizia and other merchants said it left a severe dent in their bank accounts.

The cut into holiday profits quickly began to erode the park's small family businesses, but the problems were doubled with profits lost during the summer, when the project sat just outside their doors for about two months, said Genske.

"They're scared. The summer was awful and they feel the real impact of this now," said Genske. "Coupled with the (stock market) crash, they're just scared to death."

Genske said that several merchants had to restructure their leases and others, hurt by the summer slowdown and hit again by the recent street closure, came close to bankruptcy.

"Business fell off a full third during the summer. I figure it's at least 20 percent off (currently)," said Jack Flattery, owner of Sleep N Beauty mattress shop, 615 N. Benson. Flattery said that he already has told Trojan Enterprises that they will have to cancel their lease if business does not pick up soon.

For Gulizia, the construction meant a loss of nearly $200,000 over 1986 sales.

"Last year, we made $80,000 in 15 days. I haven't done that last month and this month together," he said. "It's the first time in 35 years I've had to hold back my rent for 10 days. I've never had to do that in my life."

Like several business people, Gulizia altered his hours to try to draw more business, closing early during the week but opening his doors on Sundays.

So when the news came last week that Lowry told contractors to cover street construction with steel plates and reopen Benson sometime soon, several merchants saw a chance to recover part of a dismal Christmas season.

Guess who came scratching at the door?

By John Sinor
Copley News Service

We gave the kitten a long name right out of an A.A. Milne poem.

James James Morrison Morrison Weatherby George Dupre.

The rest of the first verse went, "Took very good care of his mother, though he was only 3.

"James James said, 'Mother,' he said, said he,

"Don't go down to the end of town, unless you go down with me."

But we just called him Jimmy.

He wasn't anything special on looks. Just gray and white and black stripes. He could very well have been the runt of his litter.

But there was something special about him.

We have had lots of cats pass through our lives and cared for them all. And we grieved when we lost them.

That's the price you pay when you take custody of an animal. You accept a future heartache.

But Jimmy was the first cat we ever had that seemed to express true affection for everybody in the family. Not just the ankle-rubbing snow job that most cats pull when it's dinner time.

He would jump up on anybody's lap any time of the day. Then he would nuzzle the material on your shirt and fairly hum with purrs.

He was a true fraidy-cat when it came to other cats, though.

All he had to do was just hear a cat fight in the yard and he would run up two flights of stairs and dive under our covers.

Then one night recently Jimmy became very ill. He was rushed to an emergency veterinary hospital.

The doctor said he had a severe blockage in his urinary tract. He was operated on and kept under watch for a few days.

Then he was sent home with instructions to keep him under close watch.

But Jimmy didn't know people were trying to help him. And he got pretty ticked off.

The third day of confinement, Jimmy somehow slipped out of the house.

He couldn't stand being cooped up in one room. And he didn't like people handling him when he was in pain.

We scoured the neighborhood. No sight of him.

My wife and the youngest girl looked in the canyon and shined a flashlight under the house.

We checked the lost-and-found ads in the newspapers. We called his name several hundred times.

By the third day, my wife said, "I'm just looking for a body now. He can't still be alive without treatment."

That night mother and daughter hugged each other upstairs, cried and accepted the fact that Jimmy was lost forever.

Guess who was scratching at the front door the next morning? James James had gone down to the end of town all by himself. And he had found out there aren't any Kitty Crackers down there.

"It Worked!"

We hear those words often in the Classified Department. "They come by letter and by phone...from the many advertisers...people like you...who have been successful in selling articles they've advertised in the Classified section of The Daily Report. There doesn't seem to be a better way to get quick results when you have something to sell than with these well-read little ads. And it costs so little, too! Private party ads can be purchased from as little as $5.00-3 lines, 4 days (Bargain Corner Ad). The next time you have something for sale, a rental or a help wanted position, give us a call. Our friendly Classified representatives will be happy to help you word your ad for quick response and little cost. Try it soon...it works!"

WRITE A CLASSIFIED AD THAT WORKS!!

Give readers
the information they want and get the results...
YOU want.

be complete.

Put yourself in the reader's place. If you were considering buying this item what would you want to know about it? Give the item's age, condition, size, brand name and any other information needed to describe it accurately and completely.

avoid abbreviations.

A few standard abbreviations can help you save space but don't overdo it. Too many abbreviations will make your ad look like a secret coded message. Rather than trying to figure out what you're trying to say, confused readers will go on to the next ad.

Price is one of the biggest concerns of classified readers. Ads that list prices will get their attention first. Including the price will also help you avoid inquiries from readers not in your price range.

List your telephone number or address so potential buyers will know HOW to contact
